“Anesthesia Diversion, Perspectives from the Mayo Clinic”

Dr Berge is a Rochester, MN native. He is an anesthesiologist at the Mayo Clinic, where he has worked for 25 years. He has a career long interest in improving drug control systems in the operating room environment. More recently, with the increasing recognition of drug diversion from the healthcare workplace, he has assumed a broader role in dealing with the issue. He now heads Mayo's drug diversion prevention efforts both locally in Rochester and nationally at all Mayo sites. He is a member of the MN Board of Medical Practice, and served as president of that group for 2014.
